

Whatever supplies you have are fine except for turpentine or other odorless solvents.

The only solvent I can tolerate is odorless paint thinner. You can purchase this from the hardware store.

This list was made off Blick's website:

Oils If you are new to oils I recommend the Artisans water based oils. These feel just like oil paints and clean up with water instead of solvents.

Winsor & Newton Artisan Water Mixable Oil Paints - Beginner Set of 6 37ml Colors shown in open tray

Any old brushes will work, but I recommend round brushes either a size 4 and 8 or just a size 6 for a start. I usually only use a one or two brushes. The Artisan brushes work best, but the ones below are ok also.

Acrylics Bring whatever you have, but if you are a beginner this would be fine.

Either a 4 and 8 or a 6.

Water based oils or acrylics

You will also need a yogurt container for water.

For regular oils you will want two jars with screw on lids and I will show you a great way to do your thinner for cleaning brushes.

All

If you have your own pallet that's fine, but if you don't then paper pallets are ok. For Acrylics I often use paper plates, but this could be better.

Painting knife

For oils it is really fun to paint with a pallet knife. Something like this

Painting surfaces

There is a huge range of cost and surfaces.

The cheapest by far is untempered hardboard from Home Depot. It comes in 2 x 4 foot sheets and could be cut up in to 6 12 x 16. Pieces. They will do it for you there. I like to paint straight on the masonite or it can be primed with acrylic gesso.

Another option is a pad of Bristol board paper primed with acrylic gesso for oils or just plain for acrylics.

You will need a board and tape if you are working on paper.

My new favorite option, because I am sick of framing are wooden panels.

Canvas or canvas panels are also fine. Whatever your budget allows. The important thing is to do lots of paintings!

12 x 16 is a good size for landscape. I would plan on at least two surfaces and I would bring them both to the first class.
